GIVE LOWER COURTS LIOUOR JURISDICTION

To Increase Effectiveness of Prohibition Laws, Says Welfare League In Resolutions

The Weltare League of Richmond registered its position in connection with law enforcement this week in the passage of a resolution urging upon Madison's representative and senator their support of kills now pending before the Assembly at Frankfort, touching the question of the prosecution of moonshiners as ! bootleggers. A prominent member of the League, in speaking of the matter, said:

"The local League is in harof the officials of the city and county and other leading citizens that there ought to be some method of more directly and immediately handling such offenders of the law. In view of the fact that the two lower conare now scarcely more than examining courts, many of this class of criminals escape punish ment through the delayed processes of the higher courts. Usually these offenders, after amination in the lower courts.

give bond for their appearance before the next grand jury. As a rule they find little difficulty in giving bond because of ready cash secured in liquor sales, Through forfeiture of bonds or the disappearance of witnesses before the meeting of the grand jury and the later trial of these cases, many of them escape punishment."

The bills now pending before the two houses in Frankfort propose to remedy these delays by giving the lower courts more effective jurisdiction.
